IDIS is an independent think tank, established in 1993 as a research and advocacy think tank, incorporated by Moldovan laws on non-for-profit and NGOs. As an independent think tank, IDIS is combining social, political and economic research with solid advocacy components. It undertakes applied field research and monitor targeted issues in several fields: economics, subsidiarity, social policy, EU policies, regional development, but also security risks and foreign policy, but, it also plans and implement regular policy debates and conferences, conduct considerable outreach activities, and regularly uphold an active presence in mass media.

IDIS is acting as a multi-issue think tank, which would fit into the ‘2nd phase think tanks’ groups. It combines a group of intertwined professional clusters, organized into thematic areas. IDIS allocates major resources to combine sectorial studies with active networking and advocacy, usually via networks of clients, allies, and stakeholders (unions, business associations, policy innovators, social entrepreneurs, local authorities, educators, and other entities), in several public mobilization projects. Thus, IDIS is ‘tanking’ its ideas, although it uphold a significant amount of analytical products, in various fields of political, social and economic interest. IDIS is not a politically-affiliated think tank, and refrutes partisan connections. Following its institutional Charter, IDIS continues to play an important role in assisting policy-makers in Moldova to comply with their institutional responsibilities, build up consensus on national priorities, bringing the country into a normalcy fit to reforms and European values.

IDIS conducts its activities in compliance with its Charter. In 2010, Ministry of Justice re-incorporated the Institute as a public association, in accordance with the law on public associations. An Administrative Board is executing oversight on the programs and projects implemented under institutional responsibility of the Executive Director. Consistent with the Charter, the Board is also advising IDIS on strategic and research issues, on programs and budgetary issues. In 2016, IDIS has established its first International Board, whose Members joined for a 4-years full mandate with the aim to guide, coach new policy areas in the economic and social policy, direct new ideas in business, governmental affairs, foreign policy, education, defense and security, cyber and e-governance. Members of the IAB attend annual or extraordinary reunions of the International Advisory Board traveling to Moldova or to other places or by holding media communications, on-line coordination meetings with IDIS management team. Participation to the flagship projects gives also important leverages to the IAB Members to oversee and expand IDIS’s field of work, professional networks and institutional affiliations.

Strategic evaluation is conducted at IDIS through Annual evaluation retreats, convened by the Executive Director and members of the Administrative Board. In terms of financial durability, IDIS is getting usually finances mainly on the basis of project proposals, with few developmental purposes. Several IDIS programs have multi-annual duration, which are thus very good in terms of making the programming more effective. In this regard, IDIS needs to orient its priorities through an Operational Plan for more than 3 years, which will project the priorities and projects that correspond to the profile, expertise, experience and ambition of the think tank. Fundraising activities need to respond to the strategic priorities, and not vice versa, on a day-to-day basis. In the areas of organizational development, IDIS has adopted in 2015 a Handbook of Procedures, which defines the proceedings in place regulating almost all legal and technical aspects related to the maintenance, organization of tenders, management of finances, negotiation of payrolls and individual contracting, workload, salary/benefits formation, hiring and dismissing of personnel, ethics. An Ethical Code of Conduct is being in place since January 2016.

Since, IDIS has grown out from its 1st stage of development, its operational tasks and strategic views became more complex. Diversifying sources of funds, setting higher standards for the implementation of functions, operational standards and clear rules for experts and technical staff would greatly improve IDIS overall management. Often, experts shall dedicate more time on fundraising than on research, while constant changes in the donor’s requirements and their limited resources (small grants) further complicates the access to resources. It is obvious that all strategic documents and new proceedings need to be accepted and internalized by the personnel. Of great use would serve to IDIS to restore regular strategic sessions, where team leaders, resident scholars and other members of the organization, would be able to define, discuss or adjust various indicators of success, benchmarks of good performance for experts and technical staff, which will have a positive effect on the impact assessment for the institutional priorities.
